I. INTRODUCTION

1. Sutton Holdings Inc ("Sutton Holdings" or the “Claimant”), a company incorporated under the laws of the Kingdom of Athabasca (“Athabasca”), hereby submits its request for arbitration against the Republic of Rhekia (“Rhekia” or the “Respondent”) pursuant to Article 36 of the Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes Between States and Nationals of other States (the “ICSID Convention”).

II. JURISDICTION

2. By submitting this Request for Arbitration, Sutton Holdings accepts the standing offer made by Rhekia to arbitrate investment disputes with investors from Athabasca, as expressed in Article XIV of the Agreement Between the Kingdom of Athabasca and the Republic of Rhekia Concerning the Encouragement, Promotion and Protection of Investments (“Athabasca–Rhekia BIT” or “BIT”) dated 15 September 2011:

   “Each Contracting Party hereby gives its unconditional consent to the submission of a dispute to international arbitration in accordance with this Chapter III. This consent and the submission of a claim to arbitration by the disputing investor shall satisfy the requirements of Chapter II of the ICSID Convention (Jurisdiction of the Centre) and the ICSID Additional Facility Rules for written consent of the parties to the dispute.” [Emphasis added.]

3. The present dispute arises out of an “investment” as provided under Article 25 of the ICSID Convention. Sutton Holdings is bringing a claim with respect to the assets of its wholly-owned subsidiary, Sutton Investments (or “Sutton”), which owns and operates a cannabis plant in Rhekia.

4. As defined in Article I(1) of the BIT, an “investment” is:

   “[A]ny kind of asset invested in the territory of one Contracting Party in accordance with its laws and regulations, owned or controlled directly or indirectly, by an investor of the other Contracting Party and includes in particular: (a) Tangible and intangible property, including rights, such as mortgages, liens and pledges; (b) Shares, stocks, bonds and any other forms of participation in companies or enterprises.” [Emphasis added.]

5. Sutton Holdings is incorporated under the laws of Athabasca, while Sutton Investments is a locally incorporated entity under the laws of Rhekia. Figure 1 illustrates Sutton Holdings’ ownership of Sutton Investments:
III. SUMMARY OF RELEVANT FACTS

3.1. The Investment

6. Following the international trend at the turn of the century, Rhekia began a strong campaign to promote the inflow of investments. Despite being a historically conservative and religious country, a liberal current in Rhekia led to the legalization of cannabis. This in turn gave rise to the opening of foreign investments in the up-and-coming cannabis industry, both for domestic and foreign consumption. Rhekia’s favorable climate and its vast, flat fields are also well suited for growing these crops, which was a major selling point made by Rhekia when it attempted to attract foreign investment into the cannabis industry.

7. In a bid to promote foreign investments, including in its fledgling cannabis industry, Rhekia entered into several BITs with other countries. This included the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT in 2011. Rhekia also joined the ICSID Convention in 2010.

8. Sutton Holdings’ investment was structured through a locally incorporated entity, Sutton Investments, as per the Rhekian Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act of 2010. A copy of the Rhekian Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act is enclosed as [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBIT C1].

9. Sutton Holdings complied with all requirements under Rhekian domestic law and obtained necessary licenses and authorizations in June 2012. A copy of the license granted to Sutton Holdings is enclosed as [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBIT C2].
10. Subsequently, Sutton Investments began work on the construction of its production sites. The construction of these production sites was completed in late 2013 and production began in early 2014. Sutton had two plants: Freya, located west of Stockhagen; and Odin, located just north of Stockhagen.

3.2. The Civil War

11. In 2014, soon after Sutton began production in Rhekia, the political situation became tense, with the population being deeply divided over the recent legalization of cannabis. The legalization of the use of cannabis, as well as the permitting of foreign investments into this industry in Rhekia was the result of a new political alliance advocating for the recreational use of cannabis, the Rhekian Development Front.

12. After the Rhekian Development Front managed to secure a majority in the government in 2010, Rhekia began to progressively decriminalize various substances, starting with cannabis. The Claimant kept a close eye on events and noted that the other political factions in Rhekia were not pleased about this development, particularly the more conservative bloc, whose members started to publicly demonstrate about the new and more liberal laws on substances. A copy of an opinion piece published in The Rhekian Daily, a newspaper in Rhekia with significant influence and outreach, is enclosed as [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBIT C3].

13. In return, outspoken members of the pro-cannabis alliance countered with their own demonstrations. However, these demonstrations increasingly became heated, with rumors that these demonstrators were paid by cannabis manufacturers. Suffice to say, those rumors are completely baseless and untrue.

14. This political divide eventually led to a civil war breaking out in Rhekia in 2014. Armed militia bands seized power in cities across the country. In some places, Rhekia’s military refused to fight the rebels and instead defected, which increased the level of instability and violence throughout Rhekia.

15. Throughout the conflict, Sutton’s cannabis production plants Freya and Odin were ransacked and looted, causing enormous losses to Sutton. The damage to Freya’s facilities also consisted of shootings, physical attacks, and incendiary devices such as petrol bombs. Meanwhile, the damage to Odin could only be described as complete obliteration. Armed Rhekian soldiers occupied entire facilities within Odin and used it as a garrison and fortifications for military defense.

16. Eventually, when Odin was overrun by militia groups, Rhekian troops decided to detonate explosives, allegedly to keep the militia groups away from supplies stored inside. Suffice to say, nothing remained of Sutton’s investment in Odin following that explosion; it was a desolate wasteland littered with landmines.

17. It is also submitted that the cultivable lands to which Sutton holds title were severely damaged. Some of these were in the immediate vicinity of Freya and Odin, but there were also several others. This has made it impossible to continue operations for several years. Overall, the damage to Sutton’s production plants and cultivable lands were a result of gunfire, fires, explosions, and physical violence carried out by either the Rhekian military, or the rebels. A copy of an interview with Sutton Investments’ CEO, Mr. Ned Flanders, published in The Viking Podcast is enclosed as [CLAIMANT EXHIBIT C4].

18. In 2017, the war concluded after the Rhekian government and the militia groups agreed to an armistice. After several weeks of election, Mr. Eilert Flyen took control of the capital of Rhekia. After several weeks, following a referendum strongly favoring him, he was proclaimed President of Rhekia by Rhekia’s parliament.

19. Following the change in leadership of the executive branch of government, Sutton was able to commence operations in Rhekia again in late 2017, after a lengthy and costly reconstruction process.

20. While it is not possible to pinpoint exactly who was responsible for the looting and destruction of Sutton’s production plants and lands, the Claimant holds Rhekia responsible for its entire losses for the following reasons.

21. Throughout the conflicts, and despite several written requests from Sutton Investments’ CEO, as well as several media reports, the Rhekian government appeared entirely unconcerned about the military situation, as well as the attacks on Sutton’s assets. Rhekia took no immediate action in terms of condemning the attack, or in terms of offering assistance to Sutton Investments. Mr. Anthony Rokari, the Deputy Minister for Home Affairs, declined to meet with representatives from Sutton Investments. In his response, Mr. Rokari merely informed the Claimant that the Rhekian authorities were aware of reports of armed conflict occurring at the Sutton plants, but that there were other matters of greater priority which required the attention and resources of the Rhekian authorities.

22. However, both during and after the civil war, several media reports have surfaced alleging that the true reason why the Rhekian government was unconcerned about these attacks was because of its belief that Sutton Investments was involved in funding the armed militia attacks. Further, a well-known whistle-blower claimed online that she had “concrete evidence” in the form of internal memos circulated within high-ranking officials of the Rhekian government, confirming that the government’s view was that Claimant was part of the “nefarious” and “morally corrupt” cannabis industry, and that Sutton Investments was funding these armed militia attacks [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBITS C5; C6].

23. These preposterous allegations are, of course, baseless and untrue. They are nothing more than a poor attempt to excuse Rhekia’s dismal performance in attempting to stop the civil war and preventing the extensive damage that has been done to the Claimant’s investments. In fact, the Claimant has deep concerns that the allegations against Sutton may have been made in an attempt to conceal widespread corruption: The Claimant’s investigations have also unearthed well-founded suspicions that some Rhekian military groups deserted to rebel groups when offered money. Thus, Rhekia has not only failed to honor its obligations to protect Sutton’s investments, but it has also directly or contributorily caused damage to Sutton’s good reputation through its inaction. Rhekia is not the only market in which Sutton operates, and Sutton has had to deal with boycotts and lost opportunities in several markets abroad following the release of evidence showing Rhekia’s wrongful assumptions that Sutton has been funding armed militia groups.

24. In fact, Sutton Investments’ fresh equity offer, that it floated in a bid to rebuild its business, was all but sabotaged by statements made by Rhekian Government officials on an investigation into the links between Sutton Investments and the militias. In addition to this, Sutton Investment’s bid for a loan from the State Bank of Braavos was rejected, citing proposed action by the Rhekian State against Sutton Investment’s, and the statements of Rhekian officials. [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBITS C7]. According to Sutton’s quantum experts’ calculations, Sutton’s losses for these moral damages are estimated to be at least USD 10,000,000. These are losses for which Sutton holds Rhekia accountable. These would adequately compensate Sutton Investments for the extensive increased costs they have incurred on combating the ill-effects of wrongful media reports, based on Rhekian State officials’ statements, as well as the lost loans and investments into its business. These damages are not an economic loss faced by the Claimant as a result of the wrongful act of the state of Rhekia, but rather is indicative of the reputational harm that has been caused to the Claimant due to the wrongful act of the State. As a result, the Claimant submits that it is entitled to moral damages, over and above any compensation that is awarded by the Tribunal for the physical losses Sutton has faced with respect to its investments in Rhekia.

25. Due to Rhekia’s deliberate inaction in trying to stop the armed conflict directed at Sutton’s production plants, the Claimants’ assets have been fundamentally impaired. During the conflict, the cannabis crops being grown in Sutton’s plants were largely razed by fire. Moreover, the production plants’ infrastructure has suffered extensive damage from gunfire, arson, and explosions. Sutton estimates that it was deprived of profits from the sale of cannabis for three years following the attacks, as its production plants essentially had to be rebuilt.

IV. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

26. In light of the above, Sutton Holdings respectfully requests the Tribunal to:

a. Find that the Republic of Rhekia has breached the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT by failing to intervene and protect Sutton Investments’ cannabis plants during the events which occurred between 2014 and 2017, and therefore Rhekia is in breach of Article V of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, specifically by failing to provide Full Protection and Security to the Claimant’s investments;

b. Award compensation to Sutton Holdings for an amount of no less than USD 45,000,000 in damages, and USD 10,000,000 in compensation for moral damages;

c. Order Rhekia to fully reimburse Sutton Holdings for the costs and expenses incurred in connection with these arbitration proceedings.

V. PROCEDURAL MATTERS

27. In view of the above, pursuant to Article 37 of the ICSID Convention, Sutton Holdings requests that the ICSID Secretary-General appoint a three (3) member arbitral tribunal. Sutton Holdings hereby nominates Ms. Rachel Green as one of the arbitrators, whose details are as follows:

Ms. Rachel Green
Attorney-at-Law,
Faizus & Co.,
Ash Street,
Cloyla
Email: r.green@faizus.cl

28. Sutton Holdings further requests that the proceedings shall be conducted in English, with the English version of the BIT prevailing.

Yan Paul Trei
President of the Board of Directors of the CRCI
In March 2010, the coalition government that had only recently come into power passed the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act. We have grave reservations about the potentially disastrous impact that this will have on our society. It is clear that this is a step too far in the wrong direction.

First of all, there is no doubt that the Act was recklessly passed, built on the false promises made in the course of political campaigning in the hopes of capturing the votes of our youth. There is, however, simply insufficient medical and empirical evidence that recreational use of cannabis will not pose unforeseen dangers to users and to our society. The politicians who sit in their ivory towers, who voted in favor of the Act are blind to these dangers. They would have you believe that cannabis is a “safe” substance and is devoid of any harm. This is clearly not the case. We urge all members of our society to carefully scrutinize and evaluate the factual basis of the reckless claims made by these irresponsible “liberal” politicians.

The passing of the Act will also have long-lasting and severe consequences on our social mores and culture. With each day, we are seeing our youth corrupted by the allure of dangerous substances that lull their mind into a sluggish haze. No doubt, the very politicians who voted in favor of this Act will see it as a gateway to legalizing even more dangerous substances in the future. This would be a sure-fire path to ruin the Rhekian youth.

Not to mention, the recreational use of cannabis will surely dilute the long and historic culture of Rhekia. We have always been a proud nation, driven by a strong agriculturally-driven economy. We cannot let our lush and fertile fields be used for nefarious purposes such as the cultivation of dangerous drugs. Moreover, it is most curious why the government is paying so much heed to the “culture” of these would-be “Vikings” and their so-called “celebration” of Sigurblót, when they are the minority demographic. Does the government mean for us to abandon our proud culture and return to prehistoric conditions, and to take after Norse Paganists? What is next - should we pick up swords and rush to battle so that we may die “honorable” deaths and go to Valhalla?

Once again, we urge you, members of our great nation, to think about Rhekia’s future if left in the hands of the current government. Already, we hear whispers of political and social unrest. Even the government is highly divided over this issue. Pick up your pens (not your swords!), mobilize each other, and fight for change. Our sources in high places tell us that there is much dissent among the ranks of this coalition government. You must not fear the revolution of the cultured and enlightened; you must join them to repel the barbaric tendencies that are polluting our government. The Legalization of Cannabis Act must be repealed.

This opinion piece is submitted by the Rhekian Citizens’ Action for Rights and Freedoms, a policy think-tank group advocating for your rights, and for the best interests of Rhekia. You can rest assured that all of our work and opinion pieces are thoroughly backed by empirical data and scientific research. As a matter of policy, we do not declare our funding, nor any sources of potential or actual conflict of interests.
Interview with Sutton's CEO:
"FREYA and ODIN are virtually dead"

Reviewing the history of Sutton's cannabis plants

MAY 31ST, 2017

In an interview with the Viking Podcast, Ned Flanders, Sutton Investments' CEO declared that their plants are "virtually dead" after the civil war outbreak in Rhekia.

Mr. Flanders visited the premises of the Viking Podcast, to share how the cannabis plants owned by Sutton Investments are nowadays, after the attacks that occurred during the civil war in Rhekia.

Mr. Flanders, going back to the beginning, could you explain what damages the plants suffered back in 2016?

Actually, the plants suffered from gunfire, fires, explosions and physical violence during those years. I cannot choose the exact words to describe the horror that Freya and Odin suffered. I remember having dinner with my family one day, watching the news, and suddenly seeing videos of Freya on fire. Entirely on fire. Such image is impossible to forget.

At the time it was reported that the Government sent some military units. Is it true?

Yes, they did send some units, but certainly not enough. Imagine trying to stop a fire in a 1,800 m² processing plant and offices, with around ten men and no equipment. Unreal believable.

Among Rhekians there are some rumors going on. Is it true that you and other high ranked employees made requests to the Government?

Of course! We would never sit with our arms crossed while our work is being destroyed. We worked for years to install these state-of-the-art plants.

So, how are the plants now?

Nowadays? Dead. They are virtually dead. Apart from having to rebuild the premises entirely, the soil was also heavily damaged, up to the point that it will not be possible to use that soil for crops. Not for months, and even not for years. A very sad situation, which the Government should assume and repair.

One last question, considering that scenario you portrayed, were you able to visit the plants recently?

Unfortunately yes. Not the plants, just their remains.
Has our government left the cannabis industry high and dry?

By Rass Skyler, published on 27 April 2015

For months now, Rhekia has been engulfed in a deadly civil war. As our cities burn, our buildings have been pillaged and the body count grows, there is no longer any doubt that our government has completely failed to protect its industries, and citizens, and cannot act in our interests.

Of course, this is hardly a surprise, given that it was a coalition which won by a bare margin, and cobbled together through promises to opportunistic “progressive” lobbyists and sycophants that Rhekia will liberalize its economy. From the start, it was clear that the political partnership would be a very tenuous one. It has also been reported, from reliable insider sources, that there is a great deal of dissent within the coalition government.

While some factions are keen to continue with the legalized recreational use of cannabis, others are convinced, albeit with the benefit of a great deal of hindsight that it was simply premature to push through with legal reforms without first convincing the conservative demographic of the great benefits to the economy and quality of life.

The infighting among the government may shed some light on why it has seemingly ignored the cannabis investors’ appeal for help. Even though it has been widely reported that the cannabis production plants have been directly attacked by armed groups on numerous occasions and that these plants have suffered extensive damage, the government has not effectively responded in subduing these attacks.

We have also received reports that the cannabis investors, chief among which is the powerful Sutton Investments, had written to Mr. Anthony Rokari, to meet and to express their concerns.

However, we have been informed that Mr. Rokari had allegedly flatly declined to meet with the representatives from the cannabis industry, and had only brusquely replied that “we can’t be seen taking a side” and that “there were matters of greater concern to prioritize, especially the third party innocent investors”.

While we are unable to confirm the veracity of this information, it would appear that if this is true, Mr. Rokari seems to be casting some blame at the cannabis investors.

This isn’t the proper forum to speak my mind about this, but I suppose what you are getting at is the potential for Athabasca investors to bring a claim against Rhekia? Lol, it seems like a clear-cut case to me. 😩

To whom it may concern,

Brann Associates LLP represents the Republic of Rhekia. This letter is submitted in response to Sutton Holdings’ Request for Arbitration, received by the Republic of Rhekia on 1 August 2021. Rhekia respectfully submits that the allegations made by Sutton Holdings in the Request for Arbitration are incorrect, incomplete, and unsubstantiated. Rhekia rejects all claims made by Sutton Holdings and objects to the Tribunal’s jurisdiction to hear the claims.

I. SUMMARY OF RELEVANT FACTS

1. The Republic of Rhekia considers it necessary to provide the Tribunal with a detailed explanation of the facts in order for the Tribunal to fully appreciate and consider the issues arising in this case.

2. Several years ago, in an attempt to foster economic growth to its economy, Rhekia signed a number of BITs, including the Agreement between the Kingdom of Athabasca and the Republic of Rhekia Concerning the Encouragement, Promotion and Protection of Investments, 2011 (“Athabasca–Rhekia BIT”), and joined the ICSID Convention in 2010.
3. Rhekia has faced a certain degree of political turbulence in recent years that has unfortunately caused some measure of inconvenience to its foreign investors. However, Rhekia has always warmly welcomed its investors, and is firmly committed to maintaining a positive and stable economic environment. Rhekia is also certain that despite the challenges that the country has faced in recent times, it has met all its obligations owed to investors under the BITs signed with its partner States.

4. Beginning in 2014, following a radical change in the government and domestic policy, a number of internal conflicts broke out in Rhekia. These conflicts arose from political and cultural fault lines, most prominently over the issue of decriminalizing the production, use and sale of cannabis.

5. Rhekia acknowledges that the internal conflicts led to frequent defections on both sides of the conflict and the initiation of paramilitary groups that may have claimed to have represented both sides. While this is of no particular consequence to the dispute at hand, Rhekia also wishes to assure its investors and the international community that it does not condone such conduct. Rhekia is committed to investigating all individuals suspected of involvement in paramilitary groups and upon concluding its findings, will prosecute such individuals to the fullest extent of the law. As such, Rhekia does not dispute that any international responsibility that arises from any wrongdoing (which, however, Rhekia unequivocally denies) shall be attributable to it.

6. Despite the tragedy of Rhekia’s internal conflicts, Rhekia has continued to honor its obligations under the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, and unequivocally denies all allegations that it is in breach of it. Rhekia has continuously provided and channeled its resources and aid in support of investors during these trying times.

7. Indeed, on 2 July 2016, Mr. Anthony Rokari, the Deputy Minister for Home Affairs in Rhekia stated in an emergency Parliamentary speech that Rhekia had strategically deployed its armed forces to subdue the armed conflict in key areas in its financial districts. Mr. Rokari also stated that the Government had consulted with key stakeholders, including its most important investors, over how to best deploy its limited resources. A copy of Mr. Rokari’s speech is enclosed as [RESPONDENT’S EXHIBIT R1].

II. THE TRIBUNAL DOES NOT HAVE JURISDICTION TO HEAR THE CLAIM

8. Notwithstanding the fact that Rhekia has plainly fulfilled its international obligations towards its foreign investors, Rhekia respectfully submits that the Tribunal lacks jurisdiction to hear this dispute.

2.1. The Claimant has not exhausted local remedies
9. First, the Claimant has not complied with the requirements set forth in Article XII of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT.

10. Article XII (2) of the BIT states:

   “Disputes concerning the interpretation and application of the terms of this Agreement and which have not been amicably settled shall not be referred to arbitration in accordance with Article XIII of this Agreement, unless 18 months have passed from the time that an investor submits the dispute to the judicial bodies of a Contracting Party.” [Emphasis added.]

11. Article XII thus prescribes the requirement that the Claimant must first show that it has exhausted local remedies within 18 months, before bringing an arbitration claim under Article XIII. It is well established that an exhaustion of local remedies clause is a mandatory requirement which, if the Claimant fails to satisfy, deprives the Tribunal of its jurisdiction to hear the dispute.

12. At the time of making its Request for Arbitration, the Claimant has not commenced any claim in the Rhekian courts. Accordingly, it follows that the Tribunal does not have jurisdiction to hear the present dispute.

2.2. Sutton Holdings is barred from pursuing its claim due to the principle of res judicata

13. In its Request for Arbitration, the Claimant omitted a crucial aspect of this dispute. While it is true that the cannabis plant is owned by Sutton Investments (a Rhekian company) which is in turn entirely owned by Sutton Holdings (an Athabascan company), the Claimant has conveniently omitted to mention a crucial fact in the present dispute: that Sutton Holdings has shareholders who had already commenced an investment arbitration claim against the Republic of Rhekia and lost.

14. As shown during the arbitral proceedings where the shareholders lost, the complete picture of the corporate structure of the investment in question is provided in Figure 1.
15. In 2017, Ms. Daisy and Mr. Donald, who own the majority of the shares of Sutton Holdings (specifically 75% of all the shares, of which 45% is owned by Daisy and 30% by Donald) (the “Shareholders”), initiated arbitration proceedings against Rhekia under the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT. While unsuccessful in their claim, the Shareholders correctly brought their claim first to the courts of Rhekia in accordance with Article XII. The Shareholders claimed that owing to the extensive damage that the cannabis plant suffered, they had ultimately suffered reflective losses when the values of their shares fell rapidly. This, according to the Shareholders, demonstrated that the State of Rhekia had indirectly expropriated their investment.

16. In November 2020, a tribunal (the “Previous Tribunal”) issued an award dismissing the claim. The Previous Tribunal considered, among other things, that there were insufficient grounds to conclude that Rhekia had expropriated the Shareholders’ investments. A copy of the Previous Tribunal’s Award dated 28 November 2020 is enclosed as [RESPONDENT’S EXHIBIT R2].

17. Against this backdrop, after very recently having prevailed against the largest shareholders of Sutton Holdings, the Respondent was surprised to receive the Request for Arbitration from the Shareholders’ company, Sutton Holdings. The Respondent has always recognized that the Shareholders essentially owned or controlled Sutton Holdings, and that they had raised their earlier claim entirely in accordance with Article XIII and XII of the BIT. In fact, the Respondent did not object to the Previous Tribunal's jurisdiction, as a display of its staunch support for the ISDS system.

18. The Respondent regrets that its display of good faith was clearly not reciprocated by the Claimant. The Claimant is now essentially attempting to get a second bite of the cherry on the question of whether “it has incurred loss or damage by reason of, or arising out of, that breach” under Article XIII, regardless of whether the subject matter of the dispute would essentially be identical to the claim which was previously considered and dismissed by the Previous Tribunal.

19. The Respondent cannot fathom how this would be in keeping with basic notions of fairness in international law, in particular the well-established principle of res judicata. If the Tribunal hears the present claim brought by the Claimant, the case will essentially relate to the same subject matter, the same cause of action, and the same parties. With respect, it would become a grievous example of a retrial; it would be yet another string in the bow of the arbitration working groups manufacturing countless “publications” on the state of investor-state dispute resolution.

III. THE CLAIMANT’S REQUESTS FOR COMPENSATION ARE MISCONCEIVED

20. The Claimant argues it is entitled to damages stemming from the Respondent’s failure to provide Full Protection and Security and for moral damages. However, this request is problematic for a number of reasons.

a. The Claimant is not entitled to damages for the alleged breach of the FPS standard

21. Although the Claimant argues that the Respondent failed to provide the Claimant’s investments Full Protection and Security (“FPS”), this is not true. Rhekia provided the highest level of protection that Rhekia was able to, given the circumstances, to the Claimant’s work sites, which were located in remote locations.

22. Additionally, the Respondent would not be required to pay compensation to the Claimant even if Rhekia had failed to provide FPS. This is because, the Compensation for War Losses clause (Article VI of the BIT) only provides that Rhekia is prohibited from discriminating in how it compensates investors if Rhekia chooses to compensate investors suffering losses due to a civil war. Because the Respondent has not compensated any investors for losses due to a civil war, the Respondent is not obligated to compensate the Claimant.
b. The Claimants are not entitled to moral damages

23. The Claimant’s arguments on moral damages are misconceived. Notwithstanding the Respondent’s stance that it has not derogated from its obligations under the BIT, the Respondent also submits that in the event of any such derogation, a claim for moral damages is an attempt by the Claimant to obtain punitive damages, which is prohibited under the BIT.

24. The Claimant has failed to meet the high threshold set by arbitral Tribunals to justify an award for moral damages and has further failed to satisfy an important prerequisite for such a claim, namely malice on the Respondent’s part. The Claimant’s exhibits also fail to provide sufficient evidence of moral harm, as well as of its causal link with the Respondent’s actions. As a result, even if the Tribunal were to find the Respondent in violation of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, no award of moral damages is due to the Claimant.

25. In any event, the quantum of moral damages claimed is unreasonable and amounts to an attempt by the Claimant to be compensated higher than the quantum of actual loss it allegedly suffered.

IV. PRAYERS FOR RELIEF

26. For all of the abovementioned, Rhekia requests the Tribunal to:

a. Declare that it lacks jurisdiction over the dispute.

In the alternative:

b. Declare that the Claimant’s requests are inadmissible.

c. Declare that the Claimant’s claims shall be entirely rejected and that the Respondent did not violate the BIT, specifically Article V.1 (FPS).

d. In case the Tribunal finds that the Respondent has violated the BIT, find:

i. that the Claimants are not entitled to any compensation for its alleged failure to provide Full Protection and Security to the Claimant’s investments because the ‘Compensation for War Loss’ clause operates as lex specialis, displacing the FPS lex generalis obligation;

ii. that, pursuant to the ‘Compensation for War Loss’ clause, the Respondent is only obliged to compensate investors for their losses on a non-discriminatory basis and no obligation arises in this instance because the Respondent has not compensated any investors; and

iii. that no compensation for moral damages is due.

and

e. Order the Claimant to bear all the costs and expenses associated with this arbitration.

EMERGENCY PRESS STATEMENT OF MR. ANTHONY ROKARI
By the Office of the Ministry for Home Affairs
Parliamentary session RK/P/FDI//2016/S/6 on 2 July 2016

1. My fellow Rhekians, it is with a somber heart that I address you.

2. Over the last months, tension has steadily brewed along the fault lines which run through our proud society. When this government passed the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act in 2010, we did so with the hopes that Rhekia would step into the modern age, embrace the ways of the world, and for our economy to reap the fruits of our labor.

3. Regrettably, Rhekia has entered into a state of civil war. We are working to subdue all threats from these terrorist groups who seek to undermine our Rhekian ideals of democracy, harmony and prosperity. I make this statement to address several matters and to assure the citizens of our great country that this government has matters under control and will be able to subdue the conflicts, and to assuage certain concerns raised by our valued investor partners.

4. I note that there have been a number of attacks on several cannabis production plants, including that of Sutton Investments. While this is a regrettable state of affairs, I must emphasize that Rhekia had to prioritize certain objectives and the utilization of its military forces. What I can say is that there are a number of high-priority areas which urgently required our attention. This included the financial districts and the areas in which our government and civil service are based. These were not only areas where essential services are based, but would have also allowed the Rhekian military and government to consolidate its resources in order to better deal with the uprising militias.

5. At present, due to operational reasons, I am unable to disclose further details relating to the Rhekian military's allocation of its resources.

6. I also note that it has been widely reported that the government has received urgent requests for assistance from investors in the region who may have or were in the proximity of armed conflict. I can confirm that we have indeed received such requests.

7. However, I will take this opportunity to refute certain allegations that have been levelled against my office. Certain irresponsible media reporters have alleged that we have ignored these requests. Others border on the malicious in asserting that we have condoned or even encouraged the attacks against the cannabis plants. Needless to say, these allegations are completely without basis and are categorically denied. To put it bluntly, these reports are fake news.

8. The fact of the matter is that this government and my office had consulted with experts and key stakeholders, which included our most important investors, to allow all feedback and concerns to be fairly voiced. I can confirm that one such consultation session did take place on 1 July 2016 and that we had invited two prominent persons in the cannabis industry, Mr. Hugh Highmountain and Mr. Budd Hogg, to represent their industry's concerns. However, given the volatility of the current situation, we regret that the records and attendance of all such meetings are highly confidential and therefore, cannot be disclosed.

9. Given the thorough and expedient measures that the government has taken, it cannot now lie in the mouth of these detractors to say that we have ignored the concerns of the affected industry. Rather, it is clear that we have given due consideration to these concerns, and ultimately we made a judgment call on how to best protect Rhekia's interests.

10. As you may know, the cannabis industry is a global multi-billion industry. It had - and continues to have great potential for growth for Rhekia's economy. We see the cannabis industry as a vital part of Rhekia's growing and modern economy. I emphasize this to reassure our partners who have invested in Rhekia's fledgling cannabis industry that your concerns have been seriously and carefully noted, and that the government is deeply committed to upholding its obligations to you and to Rhekia. We will emerge from this together stronger and more prosperous than ever before.

AND

REPUBLIC OF RHEKIA

AWARD
28/11/2020

Members of the Tribunal
Astrid Tørr Landsby

Secretary of the Tribunal
Beatrice Xativa
I. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

1. On 6 January 2017 the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (hereinafter “ICSID”), received a request for arbitration submitted by Mr. Donald and Ms. Daisy (hereinafter the “Shareholders”), against the Republic of Rhekia.

2. In their request for arbitration, the Shareholders claimed that the Republic of Rhekia had violated the Athabasca–Rhekia Bilateral Investment Treaty (the “BIT”), due to an indirect expropriation of the shares they owned in an Athabascan company, which in turn owns a cannabis plant in Rhekia.

3. Before filing the request for arbitration, the Shareholders had submitted their claim under the High Court of Rhekia, which issued a final decision in 2016, under an expedited process installed after the Rhekian civil conflict. There, the Shareholders made claims that, essentially, their shares had (i) been expropriated; and (ii) diminished in value as a result of negligence on the part of Rhekia during the conflict. These claims were made with reference to both domestic Rhekian law and with reference to Rhekia’s obligations under the BIT. The Shareholders lost on all counts before the High Court, which forms the background for the present claim before the Tribunal.

II. THE PARTIES

4. The present dispute is between the Shareholders and the Republic of Rhekia. It raises the question whether the Republic of Rhekia has breached the BIT by virtue of the civil war that arose in the country, which damaged the production facilities and consequently affected the value of the shares of the Shareholders. The Shareholders argue that, due to the situation that occurred in Rhekia, they suffered a reflective damage to the value of the shares. Therefore, they claim that there was an indirect expropriation of their investment.

5. The Shareholders own a majority (75%) of the shares of the Athabascan company “Sutton Holdings”. This company owns two cannabis production sites located in Rhekia, named “Freya” and “Odin”, through its locally incorporated entity “Sutton Investments”.

6. In the year 2014, the civil uprising in Rhekia led to several attacks on the plants, causing severe damage to the facilities, which forced Sutton to stop all production until 2017. This caused a decrease in the value of its shares. Donald and Daisy’s shares, which had a value of USD 46 in early 2014, before the civil tension begun to increase, decreased to USD 13.4 by the end of 2015, and USD 0.32 in 2016. Thus, Donald, the owner of 30% of the shares in Sutton Holdings, and Daisy, owner of a 45% share, were affected. They now claim that due to their reflective shareholder rights, the acts and omissions of Rhekia towards Sutton’s cannabis plants had a causal impact on their shares and their rights as shareholders.

7. The Republic of Rhekia argued that this situation could not be interpreted as an expropriation under the BIT, in that there was no forced deprivation of the shares, and thus, no direct expropriation. Neither was there any indirect expropriation, as there was virtually no deprivation of the Shareholder’s rights, let alone a substantial deprivation, as required by the case law.

[Intentionally not reproduced]

VI. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

[Intentionally not reproduced]

VII. LEGAL BACKGROUND

[Intentionally not reproduced]

VIII. JURISDICTION

8. [Intentionally not reproduced]

9. It is not disputed that the Shareholders are investors and that they own an investment covered under the BIT. The Shareholders are natural persons with Athabascan nationality in accordance with Article I(2)(a) of the BIT, and they own an investment in the form of shares in accordance with Article I(1)(b) of the BIT.
10. Furthermore, it is not disputed that the Shareholders are entitled to claim in accordance with Article XIII of the BIT. They are claiming for a so-called reflective shareholder loss “on behalf of an enterprise that they own or control directly or indirectly” which was subjected to various attacks and lootings from 2014 onwards. Each of the Shareholders, “has incurred loss or damage by reason of, or arising out of, that breach” under Article XIII(b)(ii) of the BIT. The Tribunal therefore considers that there is consent to arbitrate under Article XIII.

IX. THE ALLEGED VIOLATIONS

11. [Intentionally not reproduced]

12. As a result of the abovementioned attacks, the Shareholders submit that their shareholding lost value because of the sudden and catastrophic damages suffered by Sutton’s production plants. They allege that, despite maintaining ownership of their shares, they were subjected to substantial interference with its rights, up to the point that they became almost useless. Therefore, Rhekia’s actions amount to an indirect expropriation of their investment.

13. The Republic of Rhekia submits that the shift in the value of the shares is not only inherent to shares themselves, but could not amount to an indirect expropriation in this case, as the shareholders still have their investment, and did not suffer a “substantial deprivation”. As a starting point, the Tribunal notes that there were, and are, many shareholders in Sutton Holdings. It was only the Shareholders that considered it necessary to pursue this claim due to the shift in the value of their shares.

14. Moreover, the Tribunal notes that indirect expropriation is protected under the BIT. While the Shareholders are protected against indirect expropriation, the Tribunal considers that an investor cannot expect to have absolute stability in an unstable market such as cannabis extraction, in a historically traditional country, such as Rhekia. The Tribunal considers that Rhekia’s actions have, at least in part, contributed to the destruction of the cannabis production plants. The passiveness apparently displayed by Rhekia throughout the so-called civil war is particularly culpable. The Tribunal uses the word “apparently”, because during the course of this arbitration the Respondent has not provided any comments or evidence as to its involvement and role in the damages sustained by Sutton’s investments. Meanwhile, the Shareholders’ counsel offered considerable arguments and, at least, provided some substantiation by way of exhibits. The Tribunal can therefore only draw adverse inferences from Rhekia’s choice not to participate in this respect and accepts the Shareholders’ portrayal of the facts.

15. Nevertheless, the Claimants in the present dispute are shareholders of the enterprise that suffered the damages in question. In this respect, the Tribunal notes that the particular market has to be considered and given considerable weight: The Shareholders have invested in a business in which it was widely known, if not notorious, that governmental regulations and health protection institutions, operating under the vigilant eyes of the media, and a politically active electorate, continuously monitor the use and impact of cannabis and its derivatives, either in its medicinal or recreational use. Indeed, this very market could have contributed to the situation that occurred in Rhekia in 2014.

16. Furthermore, the Tribunal also notes that the market price of shares constantly shifts in value, being a volatile asset, which depends on the context in which it is placed. Therefore, the Shareholders cannot reasonably hold Rhekia liable for a mere change in value.

XI. DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

For the reasons set forth above, the Tribunal unanimously:

a. HOLDS that the present dispute is admissible and within the Tribunal's jurisdiction;

b. DECLARES that the Respondent has not breached its obligations under the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, as its actions did not amount to an indirect expropriation of the shares; and

c. DECLARES that all other claims are hereby dismissed.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Sutton Holdings Inc. ("Claimant") hereby confirms receipt of the Republic of Rhekia’s ("Respondent") preliminary response to the Request for Arbitration (the "Response").

2. The Claimant notes that the Respondent has objected to the Tribunal hearing the claims on two grounds. The Claimant respectfully submits its Memorial on Jurisdiction (the "Memorial") in response. The Claimant will show that the Respondent’s objections to the jurisdiction of this Tribunal have no merit.

II. RES JUDICATA

3. The Respondent alleges that the Claimant is barred from pursuing its claim due to the principle of res judicata. The Respondent refers to the ICSID case of Mr. Donald and Ms. Daisy v. The Kingdom of Rhekia, Award, 28 November 2020 and submits that the present case relates to the same subject matter, the same cause of action, and the same parties.

4. The Claimant brings attention to the fact that Daisy & Donald v. Rhekia was erroneously decided based on the Rhekian version of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, which led the Tribunal to the wrong conclusion that it had jurisdiction to hear that case.

5. It is noteworthy that the Award does not mention or consider that the BIT has two authentic languages - English and Rhekian. However, Article XIII(b)(ii) of the BIT contains a small but very significant discrepancy in the two official languages. While the Rhekian version of the BIT could be construed to the effect that it allows for reflective shareholder losses, the English version of Article XIII clearly does not permit that: a claimant can only make a claim that "the enterprise has incurred loss or damage" under XIII(b)(ii), which precludes the possibility of claiming for reflective shareholder losses whatsoever.

6. While both language versions are authentic, the Claimant submits that the English version of the BIT takes precedence over the Rhekian version. Where one language version contains a wording with a wider scope than the other version, the narrower version should always be preferred. This is especially true where a dispute settlement clause is concerned, such as Article XIII of the BIT.

7. Moreover, the BIT was entirely negotiated by the parties in the English language. Mr. Bunkan Bagels, a representative of Athabasca in the treaty negotiations in the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, distinctly recalls that the negotiators were working on a shared and secured document over an online platform [CLAIMANT’S EXHIBIT C7].
8. The tribunal in Daisy & Donald v Rhekia therefore ought to have interpreted the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT according to its English version. Had it correctly done so, the tribunal ought to also have found that it would not have had jurisdiction to hear the case before it. Thus, considering that Daisy & Donald v Rhekia should never have been heard by the tribunal and was wrongly decided, it would be unreasonable to consider that the doctrine of res judicata bars the Claimant from pursuing its claim in the present case.

9. In any event, the Claimant submits that the doctrine of res judicata is inapplicable, due to a lack of identity of subject matter, cause of action or parties between the two disputes.

III. EXHAUSTION OF LOCAL REMEDIES

10. The Respondent also disputes the Tribunal’s jurisdiction on the basis that the Claimant has not shown that it has exhausted local remedies as required under Article XII of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT.

11. While it is not disputed that Article XII ordinarily imposes a requirement to initiate proceedings in Rhekia’s domestic legal system before commencing arbitration proceedings under Article XIII of the BIT, the Claimant submits that Article XII does not apply in the present case. It is well established that an investor such as the Claimant only has an obligation to exhaust local remedies insofar as local litigation proceedings can realistically be achieved within the stipulated timeframe.

12. Given the heavy disruptions and delays caused by the civil war in Rhekia, it is submitted that Article XII would not advance any meaningful purpose and merely frustrates legitimate attempts of investors to seek recourse through investor-state arbitration proceedings. It would be futile to require the Claimant to have to first file a claim in the domestic courts of Rhekia before it is allowed to seek relief by way of arbitration proceedings.

13. The Claimant reserves the right to make further written submissions on the issues of res judicata and whether it is required to exhaust local remedies prior to the hearing scheduled in November 2022.

IV. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

14. For all of the abovementioned, the Claimant requests the Tribunal to declare that it has jurisdiction over the dispute.
WITNESS STATEMENT OF MR. BUNKAN BAGELS

I, Bunkan Bagels, formerly a Senior Special Counsel at Athabasca’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Department of International Law and Treaties (hereinafter the “Ministry”), will say as follows:

1. I have reviewed the pleadings filed in this arbitration to date. This witness statement sets my evidence in respect of the matters set out in those pleadings. The fact that I do not address a point specifically should not be taken to be an admission in any way.

2. All the facts set out below are within my personal knowledge and true, except where I indicate otherwise, in which event the same are true to the best of my belief.

3. I am fully proficient in both English and Rhekian languages (being the very reason for my inclusion into the Athabascan BIT negotiating team). I have reviewed all of the legal documents and email exhibits. I confirm that I understand all of the documents which I have mentioned below.

4. I worked at the Ministry between April 2000 to June 2010.
5. Starting in late 2008, Rhekia’s Minister of Trade and Fisheries visited a number of countries in the region, apparently to show that Rhekia was welcoming foreign investments and in an attempt to sign free trade agreements. I recall that the Rhekian Minister came to the Ministry in Athabasca on one occasion in March 2009, after which it became known to staff that we would begin negotiations on a bilateral investment treaty between Athabasca and Rhekia. This was when the Athabascan negotiation team first met with the Rhekian team.

6. From August 2009, negotiation rounds took place approximately every six weeks, in Vasta, Athabasca and Cittegaz, Rhekia, interchangeably.

7. While our team had a bit of experience dealing with these sorts of negotiations, Rhekia’s team seemed to be on the younger side. I found this to be surprising, as the wording of a bilateral investment treaty can be a very big deal. I would have expected Rhekia to send its most prominent experts on international law (or at least someone who had not just graduated from law school). Perhaps it was because of their young age, but I noticed that our Rhekian colleagues often went “clubbing” after our banquet dinners, something we - the Athabascan delegates - were never invited to.

8. In any event, while most of the Rhekian team seemed to have Norse roots, I was not able to detect any Rhekian accent when they spoke English, so I gathered that young Rhekians these days must be completely bilingual (this was also confirmed to me by one of the Rhekian delegates, Ms. Lisa Gunnarsen, at a banquet). Although I am very proficient in Rhekian, I did not need to use Rhekian much during the negotiations.

9. On that note, I will say that I was impressed that the negotiations were exclusively conducted in English and the level of professionalism that the Rhekian team displayed. We discussed exclusively in English and the Rhekian team introduced us to an advanced software called “Google Docs”, where we collaborated on drafting in English. I do recall that there might have been a file called “Rhekian Draft” on the so-called “Google Drive” folder (which, and I am not entirely sure about this, seemed to contain text), but if my memory serves me right this was never opened and discussed during the negotiations.

10. As the Rhekian team was rather inexperienced, very few of the clauses caused much contention. One of these was Article XIII, which was essentially copy pasted from Athabasca’s Model BIT in our draft. At the very end of our fifth round of negotiations, the Rhekian delegation conveyed that it was important that the treaty does not exclude shareholders’ rights to claim for reflective losses. I distinctly recall that Ms. Lisa Gunnarsen, an exceptionally impressive young lawyer, made a very convincing argument to this respect, and suggested a slightly different wording to Article XIII. While I was completely convinced by her argument and ready to accept her proposed changes, my supervisor responded that Athabasca would need to consider this carefully and return to them with an answer, as all of our investment treaties have a consistent wording on this point.

11. This was the last round of negotiations in which I was involved. During the banquet dinner after the fifth round, I approached Ms. Gunnarsen and asked if they were going clubbing, and she invited me to join. Based on the stamps on my hand the next day, I believe we went to Dada, Vics, Sir Teen and Destination. Unfortunately, I was feeling a bit under the weather the next day, so I had to call in sick. That did not stop my supervisor from just walking right into my hotel room, however. He told me that Ms. Gunnarsen had approached him and informed him that I had acted very unprofessionally the night before. My supervisor suggested that maybe it was time for me to move on, and that was my last day of working for the Ministry.

12. Returning then to Article XIII. It is plain as day that the English version of the final treaty contains the exact wording that was proposed in our first draft, not the one proposed by Rhekia. I therefore do not understand why the Rhekian version has a different wording than the English version, especially since we never negotiated the Rhekian version.

13. It is my understanding that the two delegations met for their sixth and final round in the winter of 2010. The treaty was signed on 10 March 2011 by Karl Blomstsson, President of the Republic of Rhekia at the time, and James Wilson, the then Prime Minister of the Kingdom of Athabasca. The Rhekian version available on the websites of the Ministry was provided by the Republic of Rhekia and merely uploaded for information.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Respondent hereby submits its Counter-Memorial on Jurisdiction.

2. The Respondent respectfully submits that the Claimant’s defenses on jurisdiction are misguided. It firmly maintains that the Tribunal has no jurisdiction to hear the claims set forth by the Claimant.

II. RES JUDICATA

3. The Respondent takes note that the Claimant’s Memorial on Jurisdiction does not address most of the Respondent’s objections with respect to res judicata, but only addresses the Previous Tribunal’s finding that it had jurisdiction in Daisy & Donald v Rhekia. With respect, this is an inconsequential point that has no implications on the dispute at hand, which for cost reasons deserves only a summary response.

4. The Previous Tribunal rightly conducted its analysis of whether it had jurisdiction based on the Rhekian version of the BIT. Indeed, as admitted by the Claimant, this language version has equal authenticity to the English version.

5. The concept of “arbitration without privity” means that an investor can accept a standing offer to arbitrate under a treaty. When there are two authentic language versions, an investor can simply choose which language version under which it wishes to initiate the proceedings. There is therefore no reason to conduct an analysis of which treaty version prevails. In Daisy & Donald v Rhekia, the Shareholders initiated the dispute under the Rhekian version of the BIT, and the Previous Tribunal was right to conduct its analysis under the Rhekian version.

6. As mentioned in the Response to the Request for Arbitration, and as the Tribunal no doubt is aware, Rhekia is a staunch supporter of the ISDS system. Indeed, Rhekia considers that the object and purpose of bilateral investment treaties is precisely to permit investors to make claims directly against states. Thus, even if the Previous Tribunal should have conducted an analysis of which language version prevails, the Previous Tribunal would have concluded that the Rhekian version takes precedence over the English version.

7. Furthermore, the Claimant is incorrect in its submission that the negotiations and drafting history of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT favors the English version of the BIT. On the contrary, in its communications with Athabasca, Rhekia was always clear that it wanted to be very accommodating of ISDS because it benefits both Rhekian investors in Athabasca and vice versa. While the proposal in Rhekia’s communication (and confirmed in Exhibit R3) did not make it into the English version of the BIT, this must have been due to an unfortunate oversight or typographical error. In any event, the communication shows that the Rhekian version should be given precedence (or at least equal weight) on this particular point [RESPONDENT’S EXHIBIT R3].

III. EXHAUSTION OF LOCAL REMEDIES

8. Article XII of the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT prescribes that an investor must first submit its dispute to the Rhekian courts for a period of at least 18 months before it may submit the dispute to arbitration.

9. The parties to the BIT have agreed that the clear procedure set out in Article XII must be complied with before an investor may have recourse to arbitration proceedings. Indeed, this is reflected in the wording of Article XII(4), which makes clear that this requirement is a “condition of [a Contracting Party’s] consent to arbitration”. Accordingly, strict compliance with Article XII(4) is mandatory, as it determines whether the parties had consented to the Tribunal’s jurisdiction over the present claim.

10. Due to the jurisdictional nature of this requirement, any exception to this requirement under Article XII(3) must be exercised exceptionally, and would not be satisfied in the present circumstances. Contrary to the Claimant’s suggestions, Article XII clearly does not create any such exception permitting derogation from the rule.

11. In any case, it is simply premature for the Claimant to assert that it is futile for them to first commence a claim in the domestic courts of Rhekia. Given that the civil war in Rhekia has been brought to an end, and that Rhekia’s judiciary has not only been restored to full capacity but has also been enhanced through its transition into providing virtual services and using computerized processes, there is no basis for the Claimant to speculate that it would face unreasonable delays in initiating domestic proceedings. The fact remains that notwithstanding the civil war, the Rhekian courts have performed remarkably in continuing to hear cases.

12. Accordingly, given that the Claimant has failed to comply with the requirement that it must first submit its claim to the Rhekian courts, the tribunal does not have jurisdiction to hear the claim.

13. The Respondent fully reserves its rights to make further written submissions on the jurisdictional issues of res judicata and whether the Claimant has exhausted local remedies prior to the hearing scheduled in November 2022.

COMMUNIQUÉ

Dear Sirs and Mesdames,

As You will be aware, I, the undersigned, am the Minister of Economy of the Republic of Rhekia ("Rhekia"). I have been continuously sitting in this role for the past twenty (20) years. As Minister of Economy, I am responsible for the negotiations of Rhekia’s economic treaty commitments.

It is with utmost pleasure that I write to inform You that, as of yesterday, our Parliament has ratified the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT.

On behalf of Rhekia, I wish to congratulate Your delegates and our delegates on their tremendously successful collaboration; which I feel represents our States’ close and long-standing friendship. I also express our heartfelt gratitude for Your hospitality during these negotiations. Our delegates have spoken very highly of the warm reception they received in Athabasca.

On behalf of Rhekia, I also note that:

Negotiations between our delegates - for the Republic of Rhekia - and Your delegates - for the Kingdom of Athabasca ("Athabasca") - for the Athabasca–Rhekia Bilateral Investment Treaty, took place from August 2009, until the Treaty was signed 10 March 2011.

As You are aware, Rhekia has a policy that all of its bilateral treaties be concluded in, at least, English and Rhekian, as these are both the official and equal languages of Rhekia. Like all other Rhekian treaties, the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT was therefore negotiated and concluded in both English and Rhekian languages.

As Your negotiators were aware of, it was considered to be of utmost importance that we conclude a treaty with the highest degree of protection to foreign investors in order to attract foreign investments. During negotiations, Rhekian delegates therefore expressed that it was essential that the Treaty allows for reflective shareholder losses, which is a feature that Rhekia has been consistent on in almost all of its modern BITs. In Rhekia’s view, this is rightly reflected in Article XIII of the Rhekian version of the BIT. Like all translations, there will always be certain linguistic limitations that need to be accounted for by our respective treaty translators. However, in this instance, I recognize that our respective translators have fallen short in that there is a small discrepancy.

Nevertheless, and as You recall, English and Rhekian versions were signed simultaneously by our respective government representatives. In consideration thereof, and for the avoidance of any doubt, I wish to underline that both English and Rhekian versions of the BIT are of equal authenticity.

President of the Tribunal

ANNEX I – STATEMENT OF UNCONTESTED FACTS

I. The countries of Rhekia and Athabasca

1. The Republic of Rhekia is a developing country, which borders the Kingdom of Athabasca, as well as the Saks Ocean. On the whole, the relationship between the countries in this region have been peaceful, marked by prosperous years of trade, commerce and the movement of people between its borders.

2. The Kingdom of Athabasca is a highly developed country, blessed with rich veins of gold, cobalt and other ores and minerals. It has three cities, Bancroft, Mapleton, and Maynooth, which form cultural centers within the local region. Athabasca has a highly skilled workforce, and a native English-speaking population. Its economy is well-diversified; it is not only one of the world’s largest cobalt exporters but is also a regional financial hub. Many investors and conglomerates are known to set up headquarters in Mapleton and use its location in Athabasca as a base for expansion plans in the region.

3. With the exception of the mountainous region on the north side of the island, Rhekia is a flat country with little elevation. The vast majority of its terrain consists of large rolling plains lush with vegetation. Historically, Rhekia has been a largely agriculture-driven economy, with more than 60% of its workforce being employed in farming, or agro-processing ventures. Although the northern part is more or less uninhabitable because of its rocky and sandy landscape, its geysers and a small inactive volcano called Leif are popular sites among tourists. Rhekia’s two main population centers are its capital, Stockhagen, and commercial center Copenholm.
4. Rhekia was completely uninhabited prior to its discovery by Saksan Viking explorers, who established vast settlements on the island, in 910 AD. The Saksans explored Rhekia, establishing settlements across its territories. The Saksans settled in Rhekia and developed their own cultures, habits and beliefs, heavily drawing from their ancestral Viking influence. Eventually, and over time, a distinct Rhekian culture began to form. As a result of the Rhekians’ love for their ancestral Viking language, and because of an influx of English-speaking Athabascan immigrants during the 19th and 20th centuries, both the Rhekian and English languages were declared the official languages of Rhekia at the time of its independence. Since then, both languages are used as the language of instruction across Rhekia, and all official and governmental communications are made in both languages simultaneously.

II. Developments in Rhekia

5. Since 2001, successive Rhekian governments have focused their efforts on fostering its economy, with a focus on training its workforce and ensuring rapid industrial development. Upon ensuring a strong, yet fledgling, domestic manufacturing industry, Rhekia decided to open up its doors to foreign investments, in a bid to capitalize on its vast lands and skilled population.

6. As part of its efforts to invite and promote foreign investments within its territory, Rhekia entered into a series of bilateral investment treaties and created various domestic ease-of-doing-business policies. During this period, Rhekia entered into about 14 BITs, including a BIT with Athabasca in 2011. Rhekia also signed the ICSID Convention in 2010, which was immediately ratified in Rhekia’s parliament in the same year. All of Rhekia’s BITs are concluded in both English and Rhekian.

7. The liberalization of Rhekia’s economy coincided with a global movement for the use of medical cannabis. Countries near Rhekia started regulating the use of marijuana for regulated medical usage. While some countries only permitted the personal cultivation and growth of cannabis, others fully decriminalized its growth, sale and consumption or reduced penalties for its sale while permitting its limited use as a medicine.

8. Rhekians watched the global move towards cannabis legalization with great interest. Many Rhekians, especially the middle class were interested in moving towards full legalization of recreational cannabis usage. A large amount of support for cannabis legalization came from an unexpected source, a Norse Paganist group known to indulge in cannabis (particularly during the religious celebration of Sigurblót, a Rhekian festival celebrating the arrival of summer). Together, these groups pushed for the legalization of recreational cannabis in Rhekia. They not only placed emphasis on the growing body of research that touted the benefits of cannabis consumption, but also the topography of Rhekia, which included large swaths of cultivable land that was conducive to the domestic production of cannabis [ANNEX I, EXHIBIT 1].

9. These social shifts in Rhekia were accompanied by a change in the political climate as well. In recent memory, Rhekian governments have always been headed by conservative-leaning parties, the most popular in recent times being the Justice and Tradition Party. However, by 2005, a new coalition government, the Rhekian Development Front, had developed a strong and committed voter base, based on their continued support for liberalization across a host of sectors, including on cannabis consumption [ANNEX I, EXHIBIT 2].

10. The Rhekian Development Front’s newfound success came from their support from two existing Rhekian political parties and their respective constituencies: Norse Pagan social-conservatives (the “Norse Party”) and middle-class progressives (the “Liberal Party”). The social conservatives in the Norse Party were largely based in rural areas and partook in marijuana consumption as part of religious rituals and ceremonies. In contrast, the middle-class progressives in the Liberal Party, located largely in the highly metropolitan cities of Stockhagen and Copenholm, supported the nascent marijuana industry for its recreational and medicinal benefits. This shift in Rhekia’s political landscape was documented in a series of articles in one of Rhekia’s well-known newspapers, The Daily Viking.
11. Between 2005 and 2010, the Rhekian Development Front improved its performance over each election until eventually winning a small majority in the national elections of March 2010 [ANNEX I, EXHIBIT 3].

12. Among other things, this new coalition government introduced a bill - the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act, to decriminalize and legalize the medicinal and recreational use of cannabis. However, they faced significant opposition, both before and after their election into power. The bill was fiercely contested both in Rhekian Parliament, as well as in public discourse, with the Rhekian Development Front managing to pass the bill by a margin of 127 to 121 votes.

13. Several pro-legalization advocacy groups seized this opportunity by organizing educational programs to explain the purported benefits of recreational use of cannabis, as well as establishing its influence by reaching out to the media, politicians, and other persons of influence. These efforts paid off, as by 2010, cannabis was legalized for medicinal and recreational use. On 17 September 2010, the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act was passed. This, coupled with interest from two large global cannabis industry leaders Cannabliss and Sutton Holdings to set up production sites in Rhekia, prompted the government to permit these investments, and to permit the production and consumption of cannabis domestically as well. This decision was prompted under political pressure from business elites recognizing the tremendous potential and scope of the cannabis industry.

14. Recognizing that cannabis could be a contentious sector, the Rhekian Parliament deliberated over enacting legislation and regulations to effectively govern enterprises involved in the cultivation, extraction, production and sale of cannabis, prior to permitting foreign investments.

15. One particular requirement under the Rhekian Cannabis (Cultivation and Production) Act of 2010 stipulated that all cannabis enterprises were to be locally incorporated under Rhekian law. Foreign investment in this sector was fully permitted, but had to be routed through a domestically incorporated company. The Rhekian government set up the Cannabis Regulation and Control Institute (“CRCI”) in order to effectively regulate this sector. A series of mandatory licenses had to be obtained from the Rhekian government and the CRCI concerning the production and risk assessment of the cannabis products, as well as the routine reporting of the business activities of the enterprise, including a thorough audit of finances in order to ensure compliance with anti-money laundering and corruption rules in Rhekia.

16. In the year 2012, multiple companies decided to invest in the cannabis cultivation sector. This included the building of cultivation sites (both outdoor and greenhouse), as well as processing plants and extraction centers. These were set up in the region of Boreal, within Rhekia. At the same time, investment funds and economists predicted that Rhekia’s new regulations were very likely to entice many more foreign investors seeking to secure a foothold in the nascent but rapidly growing cannabis industry.

17. One of the investors that set up this plant was Sutton Holdings, an Athabascan company that was one of the two companies to show an initial interest in this sector in Rhekia. Among these initial investors, Sutton Holdings made the biggest bet towards cannabis production and processing in Rhekia, investing more than USD 60,000,000.

18. In order to comply with the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act of 2010, Sutton Holdings’ investment was structured through a locally incorporated company, Sutton Investments, also established in 2012. Furthermore, an authorization had to be obtained from the CRCI which was granted in June 2012.

19. After obtaining the authorization, as well as the necessary construction permits, Sutton Investments completed constructing the first of its premises in late 2013. The production facilities were operational in early 2014, consisting of: (i) a 9.800 m² main plan, named Odin; (ii) an 8.000 m² area covered for cultivation with controlled conditions of watering, temperature, humidity and sunlight for the optimal development of the crop, named Freya; (iii) a 1.800 m² processing plant on the site to dry and process crops, with pharmaceutical standards to guarantee quality control; and (iv) a building for personnel offices.

IV. Rhekia’s shifting political climate

20. Even after the passing of the legislation and regulations legalizing the recreational use of cannabis consumption, there remained social unrest in Rhekia. The passing of the bill provoked growing protests around the country, stirred by conservative political groups writing popular opinion pieces in the Rhekian Daily, Rhekia’s national and most popular newspaper.

21. One such article published in the Rhekian Daily lambasted the moves of the current government. The article alleged that “the Act was recklessly passed, built on the false promises made in the course of political campaigning in the hopes of capturing the votes of our youth” and that it would surely “dilute the long and historic culture of Rhekia”. The article also asserted that legalizing cannabis was “a sure-fire path to ruin Rhekian youth” as it would surely be a “gateway to legalizing even more dangerous substances in the future”. It concluded with a powerful call for action, “Already, we hear whispers of political and social unrest. Even the government is highly divided over this issue. Pick up your pens, mobilize each other, and march for change.”

22. In November 2013, well-funded conservative interest groups pooled their resources and initiated litigation proceedings by way of a representative action in the Rhekian courts.
The Rhekian Citizens’ Action for Rights and Freedoms sought judicial review of the pro-legalization laws and regulations, and in particular, sought a declaration that such laws were unconstitutional on the grounds that they infringed public health and safety, public order, and public morality. This was immediately opposed by supporters of the legislation, who applied to be joined as interested parties to the claim.

23. While Rhekia's development soared as a result of the liberalization of its economy, developments to its judicial and administrative systems were slower. The Rhekan judiciary was equipped to deal with a modest case load and had not yet adopted the use of modern technology in court proceedings, including the use of online case management protocols and systems. However, in a newly liberal Rhekia, complex commercial disputes, including investor-state disputes, had become more common, leading to a backlog in cases in the domestic courts.

24. In recent years, the Rhekan judiciary had attempted to incorporate the use of technology in its processes, for instance by devising plans for the transition of court processes from paper-based to computerized, and to create an online repository of case law and resources. However, with the Rhekan judiciary having to concurrently deal with a heavier and more complex caseload involving sophisticated commercial disputes, its progress in adapting and using these technological advancements was delayed such that these modernization efforts had yet to bear much fruit by 2013. As a result, the backlog of cases persists to this day.

25. Recognizing that the claim would have monumental legal significance and public controversy, the Rhekan Supreme Court ordered that the dispute be brought before it, bypassing the jurisdiction of the subordinate courts, by way of a “leapfrog” procedure. As a result of the significant backlog, however, the judicial review claim was scheduled to only be heard between late 2014 to 2015 at the earliest, even with the expedited “leapfrog” procedure. Regardless of this delay, this development was eagerly picked up and anticipated by the Rhekan media, the legal fraternity, and the public alike. At the same time, a considerable number of detractors also questioned the appropriateness of the Rhekan judiciary weighing in on such matters, arguing that it was essentially a political matter that was best decided in the voting booth and not before a number of unelected judges.

26. In mid-2014, arguments began in the Rhekan Supreme Court, and was widely reported in the media, as was customary in Rhekia. Given the nature of the subject, verbatim accounts of the arguments in court were widely reported and read. This was accompanied by daily public debate on Rhekan national television, as well as in national dailies. While the dispute was still being heard, in 2014, the anti-cannabis movement came to a head, with individuals opposed to cannabis legalization protesting in the streets of major Rhekan cities of Stockhagen and Copenholm. Over the next few months, the scale of the protests increased dramatically as many Rhekians came out to protest their government and its policies. In response, supporters of the government's recent actions also came out on the streets, in order to show support to their elected leaders.

27. Eventually, clashes were reported between opposite groups of protestors. The frequency and intensity of public demonstrations soon increased, with protests not being limited to the issue of cannabis alone, but snowballing into large-scale rioting across Rhekia. Rhekian security forces were deployed all over in an attempt to ensure security. There were reports of some armed personnel firing at protestors, and using lethal force, that led to around 10 fatalities during these protests.

28. The ongoing litigation in the Rhekian Supreme Court, as well as the sudden protests, led to significant uncertainty regarding the legality and validity of the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act, as well as the established cannabis plants, including the Sutton plants. The effect of this prolonged legal and political uncertainty was seen in the price of Sutton Holdings’ share prices, which began to decrease in 2014.

29. Throughout these early protests, supporters of the incumbent government’s actions used social media to encourage Rhekians to show their support for the government. Information and awareness programs sprung up on all major social media platforms, focusing on the employment generated by the cannabis industry in Rhekia, its medicinal benefits, and the significant positive economic impact that the Sutton plants had brought to the Rhekians.

30. These programs also urged citizens to vocally support their government, and specifically its liberal approach to the cannabis industry. They also focused on the detrimental impact the reneging of the legalization of cannabis would have to domestic and foreign investments into this sector, and urged Rhekians to “not permit the opposition from ruining its economic progress.” These efforts caused a persistent rumor that the newly permitted Rhekian cannabis industry was funding these supporters and funding the current wave of public support towards the industry.

31. Soon after the first deaths were reported from the civil unrest, a split occurred within the Rhekian Development Front. Some members of the Norse Party became concerned with the rapid changes amongst Rhekian society and publicly broke from the coalition. Although only a small number of politicians left the coalition, it lost its majority in the Rhekian Parliament. This quickly led to the Justice and Tradition Party taking back power in the Rhekian legislature towards the end of 2014, through a motion of no-confidence.

32. On November 24, 2014, the Justice and Tradition Party, now formally in charge of the Rhekian Parliament and government, directed their security forces to confront protestors in the streets. This increased use of force by the new Rhekian government inadvertently increased the violence and scale of protests as Rhekians of varying political ideologies turned against a government they viewed as violent and repressive.

33. These protests, much larger and more violent than what occurred earlier, were the catalyst for a civil conflict breaking out in Rhekia in March 2015. Though it began as protests regarding the permitting of cannabis production and consumption within Rhekia, the protest uncovered deep fault lines within Rhekian society which ultimately led to the conflict. During the war, the Justice and Tradition Party that was in control was forced to temporarily retreat its military forces from the major cities of Stockhagen and Copenholm. International legal observers, such as the Congress for the Study of Conflicts, soon came to categorize the conflict as a non-international armed conflict and this was widely agreed upon within the international legal community.

34. This military retreat further exacerbated the issue, with large parts of the country becoming ungovernable, and descending into daily violence. The cities of Stockhagen and Copenholm were soon taken over by armed militia groups.

35. In an attempt to quell the civil conflict, the Rhekian government attempted to use its military to reinforce its authority as the legitimate government of all territories, and also to disarm and push out militant groups from Stockhagen and Copenholm. The Rhekian military, however, was unable to achieve these objectives, and the militia takeover of these two cities stayed in place for a large part of 2016. In fact, according to some sources, in some pockets of Stockhagen, Rhekian military officials refused to fight, instead defecting and joining forces with the militia, or deserting the military. Regardless of whether this was true, it led to increased instability in the region, with no hope for residents or the international press that normalcy would return soon [ANNEX I, EXHIBIT 4].

36. Another leading newspaper, the Daily Reporter, that reported on global affairs and was based out of Yukon, stated in an article dated 12 May 2016 that

"... the conflict in Rhekia has reached its zenith with the continued occupation of its major cities Stockhagen and Copenholm. Sources in Copenholm have reported instances of the Rhekian military refusing to take up arms against the militia, led by its leader Yajat. Other sources from the Stockhagen border have reported multiple instances of military personnel fleeing their camps, to join civilians within the city."

V. Attack on the Sutton Plants

37. Unsurprisingly, the Sutton Plants, which in many ways proved to be a catalyst for the civil war, were also adversely affected. On 23 and 27 June 2016, Sutton’s production sites Freya and Odin were ransacked, respectively. It was not immediately clear who was responsible for this. Both production sites contained a wide variety of production equipment, agricultural supplies, work camps, and greenhouses.

38. Odin, Sutton’s first plant located north of Stockhagen, was attacked by a coordinated force of armed militia over the course of three days. The groups of armed militia, although sparse in numbers, executed guerrilla strikes against Odin’s facilities using a variety of weaponry ranging from gunfire to incendiary devices such as crudely-made gasoline bombs. The security details employed by Sutton to protect Odin were quickly overwhelmed, surrendered, or simply abandoned their posts. This attack was widely reported along with aerial drone footage of Odin’s burning facilities. The CEO of Sutton Investments made several public requests to the Rhekian government to assist their personnel at the Odin plant during the attack.

39. In response, Rhekia mobilized a few military units within 48 hours of the attack on Odin, and ordered them to relieve Sutton’s facilities. Rhekia’s military moved north towards Odin from Stockhagen and began to face strong military resistance the closer they got to Odin. Eventually, even though Rhekia’s military was within sight of Odin, Rhekia’s military was not able to break through to the facilities and quickly got bogged down in low-intensity fighting. By this time, the Odin plant had been damaged beyond immediate repair. Rhekia’s military moved north towards Odin from Stockhagen.

40. Rumors began circulating almost immediately in the Rhekian and international press as to why Rhekia’s military failed in its objective. Rhekian government and military officials blamed their performance on the well-equipped and trained rebels, which they claimed were receiving funding from the cannabis industry. On the other hand, some reports from Rhekian soldiers on the ground indicated widespread corruption and poor morale within Rhekia’s own military as the reason for their poor performance.

41. At this time, several media reports alleged that the reason the Rhekian government was unconcerned about these attacks was because the newly empowered conservative government in Rhekia believed that Sutton Investments was partly funding the armed militia within Rhekia. Some videos were published of Rhekian leaders publicly calling the cannabis industry “nefarious”, and alleging their involvement in instigating and funding the civil conflict within Rhekia.

42. Freya, Sutton’s second plant, located in a somewhat isolated location far to the west in Freya, also consisted of agricultural buildings, work camps, and various equipment. Odin was located in an area where the authority of the Rhekian state was weaker than in the urban centers, and large numbers of anti-government protests had occurred prior to the official outbreak of the civil war. Because of this, Rhekia posted a large number of its most effective troops to that region. The soldiers took control of Freya and were billeting in the work camp accommodations. Over the course of the next few months,
Freya was slowly surrounded by armed militia groups and soon, the Rhekian soldiers found themselves surrounded and with dwindling supplies, especially food.

43. On August 27, 2016, the armed groups surrounding Freya attempted to seize a number of buildings on the outskirts of Freya. From each building they occupied, the militias were able to seize valuable supplies, including much needed food. After failing to defend a number of these buildings, the Rhekian soldiers took the decision to raze all of the buildings they could not easily defend and retreated further into the center of Freya. In the following weeks, the armed militias’ push towards Freya was slower and more cautious than before, having been delayed by concerns of an insufficient supply of food.

44. By late October 2016, the Rhekian soldiers were running desperately short of supplies. Just before they were evacuated by an emergency airlift, the soldiers placed explosives inside all of the buildings in Freya responsible for agricultural production. Although they were purpose-built for cannabis, they would be able to grow food with a few adjustments. The Rhekian soldiers were ordered to destroy all buildings capable of agricultural production before they departed, which they did. The Rhekian Government was concerned that rebels taking control over food production sites would unduly prolong the civil war.

45. By September 2016, the claim brought by the Rhekian Citizens’ Action for Rights and Freedoms had yet to be completely heard by the Rhekian Supreme Court. As a result of the civil war, the claim had been continuously postponed. In fact, since the civil war started in 2014, Rhekia’s courts have prioritized adjudicating criminal cases, rationalizing that these cases involved life and liberty, and hence required the judiciary’s immediate attention and its already-scarce resources. Even so, the courts’ capacity to hear such cases was greatly reduced, as the court personnel and law firms could not operate at full capacity. This state of affairs continued for 3 months.

46. The situation deteriorated further by December 2016. The Rhekian authorities’ intelligence units had picked up a possible bomb threat. Its analysts homed in on a single message posted on the dark web declaring that, “these dastardly judges in Rhekia cannot decide the future of our country. If we incinerate their vaunted courtroom, gavels and wigs, we remove them of their power, they will see.” However, despite the Rhekian authorities’ best efforts, the message could not be traced to its original sender. In the circumstances, with armed conflicts engulfing the surrounding districts, the government ordered the temporary barricading of the Rhekian Supreme Court, and ordered the immediate cessation of all physical operations, until the area could be secured by the military.

47. At the same time, Mr Richie Rable, Rhekia’s Minister of Law directed Rhekia’s judiciary to shift its operations online. Mr Rable declared that:
“I urge you to take heart in the midst of the civil unrest afflicting our great nation. Even during these trying times for our nation, the people’s access to justice must never cease. Just as courts in many parts of the world have, we will adapt - I have directed that our courtrooms shall move all operations online. This may take some time, but we are fully committed to ensuring that our citizens and investors have ready recourse to justice.”

48. Despite these statements, however, the reality was that the Rhekian courts, already strained under an increased case-load and the civil unrest, found it difficult to immediately establish a functioning virtual court. It took until early 2017 before the Rhekian courts obtained a secure and reliable connection to “Vroom”, a video conference platform and trained its judges and personnel to be adept in conducting online hearings.

49. By March 2017, the Rhekian judiciary managed to establish a stable internet infrastructure for its transition into conducting virtual hearings. The Rhekian courts resumed hearing cases again, albeit at a reduced pace. By this time, its existing backlog of cases had built up even more considerably. The Rhekian High Court published an official circular stating that the estimated time required for a typical case to be heard at the first instance was between 16 to 18 months after it was first commenced.

50. To date, the Claimant has not commenced any claim in the domestic Rhekian courts.

51. By April 2017, both the Rhekian military and the militia groups had been worn down by the months of conflict, and their resources and morale had been stretched to the breaking point. Recognizing that they were effectively in a gridlock, the government and representatives from all the militia groups agreed to a general armistice.

52. The Rhekian Ministry of Home Affairs organized weekly press conferences following the armistice to provide its citizens updates on Rhekia’s track towards restoring normalcy. Many of Rhekia’s industry that had been affected were on the road to redeveloping, and its population was certain that this resurgence of commerce and investment would greatly accelerate its rebuilding. Sutton Investments too decided to re-invest into its plants, so as to not face a total loss on its investments into Rhekia. To finance this, Sutton Investment sought to take a loan from the State Bank of Braavos, as well as issue fresh equity. Sutton Investments began these funding processes in July 2017. In the same month, during a weekly press conference Mr Anthony Rokari included in his statement that the alleged links between the Claimant and the militia that began the civil uprising in Rhekia were actively being investigated by the Rhekian government, in accordance with the due processes of the law.
53. Sutton Investment’s fresh equity offer was scheduled for August 2017, where it was heavily undersubscribed. The request for a loan from Sutton Investments was also denied by the State Bank of Braavos.

54. In May 2017, the Rhekian Supreme Court released its judgment on the constitutional challenge to the Cannabis (Cultivation and Promotion) Act. The Rhekian Supreme Court rejected the claim on the basis that there was insufficient evidence to find that the legalization of cannabis infringed public health and safety, public order, and public morality. The Rhekian Supreme Court also expressed that given the intense political and social implications of the matter, the substantive merits of the Act was essentially a political matter, to be resolved in Parliament in order to keep the balance in the separation of powers, and thus unsuitable for adjudication.

55. An election was held and Mr. Eilert Flyen, previously a prominent militia commander running as an Independent candidate, was proclaimed as the new President of Rhekia by Rhekia’s parliament. The election was conducted with transparent procedures and thorough reporting. The result was undisputed by all the political parties involved.

VI. Donald and Daisy v. Rhekia

56. Sutton Holdings is a large MNC, headquartered in Athabasca. It invests in a number of sectors, mainly pharmaceuticals, cannabis, and related production sectors. It is a joint stock company, with a majority of shares (at the time of its investment into Rhekia) being held by Donald and Daisy, two Athabascan nationals. In particular, Donald and Daisy held 75% of all the shares in Sutton Holdings (of which 30% was owned by Donald and 45% was owned by Daisy).

57. The breakout of a civil conflict in Rhekia sent shockwaves through the international community, in part due to the high value of investments in this region. Specifically, Donald and Daisy of Sutton Holdings saw their share prices fall from USD 46 each at the end of 2014, to USD 13.4 each at the end of 2015, and to USD 0.3 in 2016. This rapid fall did not allow Donald or Daisy to sell their shares to recoup losses in due time. At the beginning of 2016, Donald and Daisy initiated litigation against Rhekia in an attempt to recover their losses.

58. After a special and expedited litigation process that finalized in December 2016, Donald and Daisy ultimately lost on all counts, they commenced arbitration proceedings against Rhekia in January 2017. They claimed that the damage sustained to the Sutton Plants caused a significant reduction in the value of their shareholding in Sutton Holdings, and they were thus entitled to compensation from Rhekia under the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT.

59. Donald and Daisy, inter alia, claimed that Rhekia’s actions amounted to an indirect expropriation of their shares, and therefore there was a breach of Article VIII of the BIT. In November 2020, the tribunal, set up under ICSID, pronounced its award. The Tribunal rejected Donald and Daisy’s claim, stating that there was no substantial deprivation of the investment, and therefore no expropriation occurred.

VII. The Present Claim

60. In June 2021, Sutton Holdings decided to file a claim for arbitration under the Athabasca–Rhekia BIT, with the application of the ICSID Convention.

Pot-smoking Vikings Alarm and Surprise the Nation

In the latest news guaranteed to shock (And some say appall) the nation, adherents to Norse Paganism within Rhekia have taken to publicly "toking" or "puffing on" cannabis!

Norse Pagans, a familiar site in the Rhekian countryside, have apparently been seen celebrating this year’s Sigurblót festival celebrating the arrival of summer with what experts are calling "a joint".

Although the Norse Pagans themselves claim to have partaken in this tradition for as long as they can remember, some of Rhekia’s social conservatives aren’t so sure!

One older couple on the main streets of Copenholm were quoted as saying “This is madness! Back in my day this tomfoolery would not stand!”

I seriously worry about the cultural and moral makeup of our great nation if these ‘celebrations’ continue.”

Others however are not so concerned.

This reporter spoke to many others also out and about in Copenholm that were very supportive of the Norse Pagans:

“I support the Norse Pagans and furthermore, would support the increased liberalization of cannabis laws in Rhekia, the current prohibition has failed.”

“I've never partaken personally, but I have nothing against other doing so”

And there you have it, “weed” or “marijuana” seems to be an up and coming issue for our great country!

Issue #01

This year’s election was once again won by the incumbent Justice and Development Party, but the final vote results may surprise you!

Over the past decade the Rhekanian Development Front (a coalition party made up of the Liberal Party and the Norse Party) has steadily increased their seat count each election.

This year they came the closest they have ever come to seizing power! Winning barely a dozen seats less than their opponents, the Justice and Development Party.

Justice and Development Party leader Karl Ragnarson was quoted as saying “I’m totally not concerned, should I be?”

Well as your ace-political reporter here at the Daily Viking, I’m here to tell you YES! The moribund leadership at the Justice and Development Party should be very afraid!

Even after the last vote was tallied and the election was officially called in favour of the Justice and Development Party, the attitude remained jubilant at the Rhekanian Development Front’s election headquarters.

Party officials and volunteers were incredibly pleased to see their electoral strategy continue to pay off.

Meanwhile at the Justice and Development Party Headquarters, officials seemed relieved to see they had won the election but also seemed anxious and nervous at how close the election had been.

A Change in the Halls of Power?
The latest updates to get you through the day

Huge news today as the Justice and Tradition Party lost a confidence vote, and for the first time in living memory for many Rhekians, our Parliament is not controlled by the Justice and Tradition Party!

Today marks the first day in power of the Rhekian Development Front, a coalition government between the unlikeliest of allies, the Norse Party and the Liberal Party!

The Rhekian Development Front has made the further liberalization of Rhekia’s economy and society a main pillar of their election platform.

Clearly, Rhekians wanted change!

Whether the Rhekian Development Front will truly be as transformative as they promise will remain to be seen!

However, what is clear, is that a period of transformative change is store for the future of Rhekia!

Disturbing reports coming from the frontlines these days!

Even as all Rhekians remain glued to their phones and TVs watching the scenes of horror unfold this past year the worst appears yet to come!

Each Contracting Party shall admit the entry of investments made by investors of the other Contracting Party pursuant to its applicable laws and regulations.

CHAPTER II: PROTECTION TO INVESTMENT

ARTICLE III: National Treatment

1. 2. Without prejudice to its laws and regulations at the time the investment is made, each Contracting Party shall accord to investments of investors of the other Contracting Party treatment no less favorable than that it accords, in like circumstances, to investments of its own investors with respect to the operation, management, maintenance, use, enjoyment or disposal of investments.

The concepts of “fair and equitable treatment” and “full protection and security” do not require treatment in addition to or beyond that which is required by the international law minimum standard of treatment of aliens as evidence of State practice and opinio juris. A determination that there has been a breach of another provision of this Agreement, or of a separate international agreement, does not establish that there has been a breach of this Article.

ARTICLE VI: Compensation and Damages for Loss

1. Investors of one Contracting Party whose investments in the territory of the other Party suffer losses due to war, armed conflict, revolution, state of national emergency, insurrection, civil disturbances or other similar events, shall be accorded by the latter Contracting Party treatment, as regards restitution, indemnification, compensation or other settlement, no less favorable treatment than that which the latter Contracting Party accords to its own investors or to investors of a third State.

(b) Be paid without delay;

(c) Include interest at a commercially reasonable rate, from the date of expropriation until the date of actual payment; and

(d) Be fully realizable and freely transferable.

3. An investor whose investment is expropriated, shall have the right to a prompt review of its case by a court or by any other competent authority, pursuant to the applicable laws of the corresponding Contracting Party, and to an assessment of such investment in accordance with the provisions set forth in this Article.

CHAPTER III: DISPUTE SETTLEMENT

ARTICLE XI: Purpose

This Section shall apply to disputes between a Contracting Party and an investor of the other Contracting Party arising from an alleged breach of an obligation set forth in Chapter II entailing loss or damage.

ARTICLE XII: Consultation and Exhaustion of Local Remedies

1. Any dispute arising out of an investment between an investor of a Contracting Party and another Contracting Party (collectively the “Disputing Parties”, individually a “Disputing Party”), shall, as far as possible, be settled amicably through consultation or negotiation.

2. Disputes concerning the interpretation and application of the terms of this Agreement and which have not been amicably settled shall not be referred to arbitration in accordance with Article XIII of this Agreement, unless 18 months have passed from the time that an investor submits the dispute to the judicial bodies of a Contracting Party.

3. Each Contracting Party requires that the exhaustion of local judicial remedies be a condition of its consent to arbitration under Article XIII of this Agreement.

4. With a view to settling the claim amicably, the disputing investor shall deliver to the disputing Contracting Party written notice of its intention to submit a claim to arbitration at least six months before the claim is submitted.

5. Such notice shall specify:

(a) The name and domicile of the disputing investor and, where a claim is made by an investor for loss or damage to an enterprise, the name and domicile of the enterprise;

(b) The provisions of Chapter II alleged to have been breached and other relevant provisions;

(c) The issues and the factual and legal basis of the claim; and

(d) The relief sought and the approximate amount of damages claimed.

ARTICLE XIII: Arbitration – Scope and Standing and Time Periods

1. Pursuant to this Chapter, an investor of a Contracting Party (a “Claimant”) may submit to arbitration a claim that the other Contracting Party (the “Respondent”) has breached an obligation set forth in Chapter II, and that the investor has incurred loss or damage by reason of, or arising out of, that breach.

2. In the event that a Disputing Party considers that an investment dispute cannot be settled by consultation or negotiation pursuant to Article XII:

(a) A Claimant, on its own behalf, may submit to arbitration a claim

(i) That the Respondent has breached its obligations under Articles III, IV, V, VI and/or VII of this Agreement, and

(ii) That the Claimant has incurred loss or damage by reason of, or arising out of, that breach; and

(b) A Claimant, on behalf of an enterprise of the Respondent that is a juridical

(ii) That the enterprise has incurred loss or damage by reason of, or arising out of, that breach.

3. A Claimant may submit the claim to arbitration under:

   (a) The ICSID Convention, provided that both the disputing Contracting Party and the Contracting Party of the investor are parties to the ICSID Convention;

   (b) The ICSID Additional Facility Rules, provided that either the disputing Contracting Party or the Contracting Party of the investor, but not both, is a party to the ICSID Convention;

   (c) The UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules; or

   (d) Any other arbitration rules, if the Disputing Parties so agree.

4. A Claimant may submit a claim to arbitration only if the investor consents to arbitration in accordance with the procedures set forth in this Section.

5. The applicable arbitration rules shall govern the arbitration except to the extent modified by this Chapter.

6. A dispute may be submitted not later than three (3) years from the date that the Claimant first acquired or should have first acquired knowledge of the events which gave rise to the dispute.

7. The Contracting Parties recognize that under this Article, minority non-controlling investors have standing to submit only a claim for direct loss or damage to their own legal interest as investors.
ARTICLE XIV: Contracting Party Consent

Each Contracting Party hereby gives its unconditional consent to the submission of a dispute to international arbitration in accordance with this Chapter III. This consent and the submission of a claim to arbitration by the disputing investor shall satisfy the requirements of Chapter II of the ICSID Convention (Jurisdiction of the Centre) and the ICSID Additional Facility Rules for written consent of the parties to the dispute.

2. An interpretation jointly formulated and agreed upon by the Contracting Parties with regard to any provision of this Agreement shall be binding on any tribunal established under this Section.

ARTICLE XX: Awards and Enforcement of Awards

   (a) Monetary damages and any applicable interest; or

   (b) Restitution in kind, provided that the Contracting Party may pay pecuniary compensation in lieu of restitution.

2. Where a claim is submitted to arbitration for loss or damages to an enterprise:

   (a) An award of restitution in kind shall provide that restitution be made to the enterprise;

   (b) An award of monetary damages and any applicable interest shall provide that the sum be paid to the enterprise; and
